Mr. WEBSTER stated that the Committee on the Judiciary had not been mattentive to the subject. They had procured copies of the decisions, and would shortly have them, together with the rules, put into the possession of the House.

Mr. JOHNSON did not think the case before the Committee, went to the length which bisdid His proposition went to take away the legislative power from the Judiciary. He was not anxious to have his motion pressed.

Mr. WICKLIFFE stated that he had, some time since, submitted a resolution on the subject to which this resolution applies. A considerable improvement had taken place in the money market in London. The result of the cabinet deliberations upon the subject of the embarrased state of money affairs had partially transpired, not in a suspension of cash payments by the bank of England, nor in an unlimited issue of paper, as some had sumised but in an order to the offices to expedite with all possible despatch, an extraordinary coinage of sovereigns. There are eight presses, which on cases of emergency, can all be put in action as has been done at present, and each press coins 40 sovreigns in a minute, making 320 sovereigns by the whole eight presses in a minute, or equal to 19,290 in an hour. Allowances must, however be made for the breaking of dies &c. which dimunishes the amount of coinage; and this week 150,000 sovereigns per day have been coined. Mr Wallace is in constant attendance, and is assiduous and indefatigable in urging on the work.

The death of the Emperor Alexander, of Rus sia, has been viewed by many of our cotempo raries as an event traught with important consequences. We are inclined to somewhat a differ ent opinion. The treaty of the Holy Alliance is. it is true, a personal one between monarchs, having been signed by their own hands, which is unusual. Supposing that the new emperor Constantine should consider himself exonerated from the course which it incultates. That treaty is, negro in the last extremities."-Nat. The desire of the people of their respective dominions, for the enjoyment of rational liberty, is not less at this time than it was when the compact was formed; and it may be fairly presumed that the European sovereigns have lost none of their feeling for the perpetuation of the property of their kingdoms in their respective families. therefore, the emperor Constantine be of that the sanction of Russia to it.

Russian politics, in relation to Turkey, rest upon a basis totally different from that of the Holy Alliance. Pursuing the design of the empress Catharine, the court of St. Petersburg has constantly kept in view the acquisition of Constanti- ents of a higher order. And above all, he was a nople, and perhaps a portion of the Turkish provinces in Europe. > FROM THE NEW-YORK DAILY ADVERTISER. The death of the Emperor Alexander of Russia may be considered as one of the most interesting and important events that could happen to the po litical world. And although we shall not pretend to foretel what will certainly be the consequence of it, it is not difficult to imagine what some of those consequences may be.

Alexander was the head, the life, and soul of the "Holy Alliance." The Emperor of Austria, and the King of Presia, being greatly his inferiors in taleuts, as well as power, have been obliged to move in that association, entirely according to his despotic temper which has been ascribed to him, will and pleasure. Being at the bead of an imthe treaty of the Holy Alliance will exactly suit mense empire, the character of which is millitary; him; and he will, it is most probable, continue being able at all times to command as many troops as he pleased, and those among the most hardy and devoted in the world; being also in the strictest sense of the term an absolute despot, he moved the mighty machine of his government in any direction and for any purpose that he pleased. To all these peculiar advantages, in our opinion, the added talman of business-he did not depend upon otherscontrolled them as he saw fit. In such a situation and with such qualifications, it could not be otherwise than that he should possess unbounded weight and influence, and in a great measure the controll there is no room to doubt. How far Prussia may have been satisfied under it, we have no means of knowledge. Frederick and Alexander, were nearly related by marriage-Prussia was rescued by Russia from ruin; and doubtless Frederick wast so far have felt himself under great obligations to

With regard to Austria, we think the case is clearer. There is no doubt that the Emperor Francis has been jealous of the policy and power of the Emperor Alexander. Having had time and opportunity to recover, in some measure, from the exhaustion and degradation to which the nation was reduced by the French Revolution, it is altoto submit to .- There are many reasons for believing that Austria has regarded with much jealousy the policy of Russia towards the Turks and Greeks. It must have been fully believed by the Austrian government, that Alexander intended first or last to drive off the Turks, and become possessed, by right of conquest, of their fine territories in Europe ich an event would place Austria completely at the mercy of Russia, as it would bring the latter down to the Mediteranean, and place them in a ntent that he should one day be the sovereign of it.

How far be may be qualified to execute this magin the possession of the Patriots of the Banda Ori. nificent project, we eave no other means of judging than the conclusions which are naturally formed from the opinion above expressed of his general character. Should he undertake to realize his that place, and gave three cheers. > From the London Times. PERKINS' STEAM GUN.

The neighborhood of Mr. Perkins' safety steam ngine manufactory near the Regents' Park, was on Tuesday thrown into great consternation by made before May next. Much will depend on which occurred several months ago, where a lady the capacity of the chief who will command the threw herself from a gig, in consequence, as it was expedition, but more on the harmony of the allies, at the time incorrectly supposed, of her horse hav ing taken fright at the prodigious noise made by the men with placards on boards, warning all passen gers on horseback or in carriages to go through the Regent's Park, instead of proceeding by the high road leading in front of the manufactory. Soo after nine numbers of military officers, in carriage and on horseback, alighted at the manufactory. They were soon followed by the Duke of Welling ton, and immediately afterwards the discharge of steam, which had been previously occasional, and of comparatively slight force, commenced with continued roar, resembling the londest thunder w. ever heard. The group of eminent persons then assembled consisted of his Grace the Master General of the Ordnance, and his Staff, the Marquis of Salisbury, Mr. Pell, Sir H. Hardinge, Lord Fitz ov Somerset, the Judge Advocate General, and nany military officers of the highest rank; togethe with a Committee of Artillery and Engineer Offi ers, who, it appeared, had been officially appoint doy the Duke of Wellington to examine into the nerits of this wonderful specimen of human ingeuity and destructive power. The discharge team now became almost incessant for two hours uring which, its incalculable force and astonis! ig rapidity in discharging balls excited amazemen nd a meration in all present. At first the ball were discharged at short intervals, in imitation of tance of 35 yards. Such was the force with which they were driven, that they were completely shattered to atoms. In the next experiment the balls were dischaged at a frame of wood, and they actu ally passed arough 11 one inch planks of the hard-est deal, place and a distance of an inch from each tacked vesterday morning, so violently, that the very first trial the hall passed through it. On all He took a small guantity of the gin and hot waforce that gunpowder could exert. Indeed we un derstand that this plate had been brought specially from Woolwich, for the purpose of ascertaining the comparative force of steam and gunpowder. pressure of steam employed to effect this wonderful it was repeatedly stated by Mr. Perkins that the pressure might be carried even to 200 atmospheres with perfect safety. Mr. Perkins then proceeded to demonstrate the rapidity with which muskets balls might be projected by its agency.—To effect this he screwed on to the gun barrel a tube filled with balls, which, falling down by their own gravity into the barrel, were projected, one by one, with such extraordinary velocity as to demonstrate that, by means of a succession of tubes, filled with balls, fixed in a wheel (a model of which was exhibited. mearly one thousand balls per minute might be discharged. In subsequent discharges or volleys, the barrel, to which is attached a moveable joint, was given a lateral direction, and the balls perforated a plank nearly twelve feet in length. Thus, if opposed to a regiment in line the steam gun might be made to act from one of its extremicies to the other. A similar plank was afterwards placed in a perpendicular position, and, in like maner, there was a stream of shot holes from the top to the bottom. It is thus proved that the steam gun has not only the force of gunpowder, but also admits of any direction being given to it. But what seemed to create most surprise was the effects of a volley of balls discharged against the brick walt by the side of the target. They absolutely dug a ole of considerable dimensions in the wall, and penetrated almost one half through its thickness. We heard several officers declare their belief that, had the balls been made of iron instead o lead, they would have actually made a breach through it-the wall was 18 inches thick.

BIRTH DAY CELEBRATION.

The 22nd of February was celebrated in this lace with more than usual spirit. According to arrangements previously announced, the Lexington Artillery Cadets commanded by Capt Pike and the Lexington Light Infantry commanded by Capt West with several officers in uniform assemled at the University at 11 o'clock. There they met the Union Philisophical and Whig Societies, and Medical Class of Transylvania, and after an in company with the Duke of SAKE-WEIMAR. oration from Mr. Parker of the Whig society, were formed in procession with such citizens as attended, and moved to the Methodist Episcopal church. There an oration was delivered by James O. Harrison Esq at the request of the Lexington Light Infantry company. From thence the procession moved to the Episcopal church where an oration was delivered by Mr. Waller Redd of the U P scciety of Transylvania. The procession was then conducted to the College green, where the military corps separated from the rest of the procession, and were shortly afterwards dismissed. A Federal salute of 13 guns were fired at day light from the Artillery of the Cadets. Of the merits of the orations delivered on the occasion, it would be unnecessary to say any thing to those who heard them. They gave general satisfaction to crowded andiences, and were highly creditable to the orators.

- JANUARY 28, 1826. "Sia: -On the subject of the Governor's message I am at a loss for language to express my admira tion of its force and overpowering strength, especially in the purpose for which it was designed! What astonishment and dismay must have been produced among his adversaries! I do actually call it one of the greatest state papers that has made its appearance in a quarter of a century, and my great Franklin County to Miss Mahala Kirkfatrick amazement is, that it makes no more noise among the republicans throughout the union than it does t can only be accounted either upon the ground that the zeal and interest which formed and kept that party together have disappeared and they can not again be aroused to their former exertions, or i is owing to the unfortunate situation in which the Governor has been placed by the still more unfer-tunate act of his son."

One remark I will venture in relation to this pre clusion, that if it had sprung from the pen of Adams or Clinton it would have wrong through every paper and been pamphleted and hand billed in every state in the Uniou. This operation of mine on the merits of this message is by no means the result of enthusiasm arising from a coincidence of opinion on many of the subjects to which it refers, nor is it an account of any peculiar partiality for the character of the Governor himself. For to tell you the truth my prejudices have been the other way; so far as an imperfect knowledge of your dispute could produce any."

Accounts from Napoli di Romania states, that the Greek Senate having convoked all the polemarchs and captains to consult them in the present state of affairs, one of the French officers who served under the banners of the Greeks made the following speech to the assembly:

"Gentlemen-You have but two ways to take, either you must call all the nation to arms, the Senate at the head, and fight to the last gasp for liberty, or you must throw yourselves at the feet of your tyrants, and resume your old chains. In: the first case, all the Philhellennes will join you to conquer or die under the standards of the Cross; in the second, permit us to return to our own country to bewail the misfortunes of Greece."

'This discourse had such an effect on the minds of all the auditors, that it was resolved upon the spot to take arms, and march against the enemy.' No part of the United States is advancing more rapidly in population and wealth than Florida. The acting governor of the territory, in his recent message to the legislature, states that in Tallahassee, the capital (which a year since was a wilderness,) 160 acres of land have been sold within a few months for nearly $25,000, and that, already 100 houses are erected or in a course of erection. With a view to increase the prosperity of the territory, the governor recommends a resolution inviting General La Fayette to visit the country during the ensuing autumn and winter, and to take up his abode on the estate which was granted him by Congress. The governor also recommends the passing of a law exempting all the property of the General from taxation during his natural life.

The Speeches

HENRY CLAY,

In the Congress of the United States, from 1810 to 1824, inclusive.

FEW individuals in our country have performed more important part in its political relations, or Clay. For fifteen years he has filled the most conspicuous stations in the gift of his country, and the history of his public career is essentially associated with that of the nation. To him, more than to any other individual now living, may be attributed that course of a few years

Among the Florida productions, which merit notice, the last Pensacola paper points out to us a Vegetable Wax, which is made from a set of the property, so greatly exalted our character, and so extensively diffused our reputation. To his Speeches in Congress we may look as the sources of the prosperity, so greatly exalted our character, and so Government for several years past, -acts which have laid the foundations of the glory and prosperity of his country, and which have reared an imperishable monument to the magnanimity of his principles, the vigor of his intellect, the accuracy of

It is greatly to be deplored, that no memorials of these instructive and splendid effusions of natural genius and cultivated talents are to be found, except in the ephemeral newspapers of the day, which at the lower end of Main street, adjoining Mont few have preserved, and which are now inaccessible to the great mass of society. Believing that these excellent speeches are worthy of preservation and that the public participate in our opinion we have resolved to undertake their publication, in a favour to call on him. form more convenient for general use, and better calculated to diffuse their benefits, than that in which they are now to be found.

The work which we propose to publish will com prise the following speeches delivered by Mr Clay, all of which refer to subjects of general interest. and which can never be read without instruction and delight by the peliticians of our country, even after many succeeding generations shall have pass-

For thou, throughout my life hast been, A close companion. In youth when I but little knew, Of care-when troubles were but few,

Twas then methinks, I first saw you In sables clad; My mirth was banish'd and I grew Depress'd and sad.

From that time forward, oft I've seen, Thy uncouth form, ill-favor'd quean, For thine is a most hideous mien By none admired; Ten thousand times at least I've been Ofit quite tired.

for the last ten years at least Tho' not immediately prest To visit me; For I have oft-times been distrest, Thy form to see.

For sometimes, when I feel quite gay, And cheerfully would pass away, With friends a happy, social day, Thou hast intruded Thy hated company on me, Which joy precluded.

Then, Melancholy grave, away! Intrusions vile, have had their day, Surely, thou canst among the gay, Enjoy thy leisure, And I will praise thee in a lay,

Miscellaneous.

FROM MY RIDICULE, Z. "Nothing so true as what you once let fall, Most women have no character at all." This ever thought there was nothing less true Queen Elizabeth, Lady Jane Grey, Mrs. Siddons, Hannah Moore, Madame, de Stael,-had they no characters at all? Look through the pages of history and the volumes of female biography; is there woman celebrated in either who has no character? View private life in all its recesses, are not the good and bad passions, virtues and vices, heroic quaities and strongly marked lines of character, as conspicuous in the female sex as in the other! Cast your eye into the chambers of sickness, and see the unabated tenderness and patient affections, that alleviate the pangs of disease and administer comfort and relief, and say if women have no character there! Behold the angels of charity unwearied in diminishing the sum of human ignorance and misery, and tell me if the zeal perseverance and success displayed by these female philanthropists, indicate no traits of character? Consider the thousand examples of unalterable female attachment and the innumerable and almost inconceivable sacrifices it has made for men beloved; is there no character, shown in this particular! Reverse the picture a little, and ask those men who are unhappy at home, if their wives have no character! Had Xantippe, the wife of Socrates, no character? I will abide by the decision of any of those amiable husbands, called "hen-peckt," and if they agree with Mr Pope, I will give up my opinion. What is "bundie of habits nave women, save it is a Habits result from feelings principles and accidental occurrencies. To the influence of these, women are peculiary subject, by reason of their greater degree of sensibility. The sphere indeed in which their habi s operate is confined and limited, now seldom moving but in domestic scenes, and in the drawing rooms of fashion. How often do we behold all the virtues and graces of aracter exhibited by the respectable matrons, who preside with digoity over their families! How often have we seen misfortune and affliction reverse their affairs and draw forth the noblest traits of character! Sometimes too we see termagants in all the terrible energy of their majesty; and sometimes the sullen obstinacy of mulish tempers. Pervishness and inmost decided character.

In ball-rooms character is no less eminently displayed. Go into one of these circles of tashion, and you will find all the varieties of passion exhibited-The love of distinction shows itself in a thousand ways. Ambition operates with as much intenseness as money, politicians. One young lady courts notice by her forward manners; another by a towering head-dress; a third by the elegance and variets of her ward robe; a fourth by most super pearls and jewels; a fifth by nutlity; a sixth by lond talk and laughter; a seventh by da long like open girls, an eighth by aiways tak ng the lead in cotilions; and as many different methods. Envy and ill nature also often discover themselves in these scenes of gatety. The whispering breeze o scandal and malignity often craeps along the beuches when the wallflowers are paraded; and many go to these places but to observe, exaggerate and defame. No two women in a ball-room are more a like in character than in dress; and at different parties different traits of character open themselve in the same woman, and with as much variety a their drapery. Let us then not sacrifice sense to Isound, nor believe in a witty remark, merely because it is clothed in smart expression. EUTERPEAD.

FROM THE LONG BOX.

CAUSE OF, AND GURE FOR, HARD TIMES. I profess myself to be an honest farmer; for 1 ca ay, that no man could ever charge me with a dis honest action. I see with great grief, that all the country is afflicted as well as myself. Every one is complaining and telling his grievances; but I find they do not tell how their troubles came on them know it is common for people to throw the blame of their own misdeeds upon others, or at least to excuse themselves of the charge. I am in great tribulation; but to keep up the above character of an honest man, I cannot in conscience say, that any one has brought my troubles on me but myself "Hard times and no money" says every one. A short story of myself, will show how it became "Hard times and no money" with me, at the age of sixty five, who have lived well these forty years.

My parents were poor, and they put me at twelve years of age, to a farmer, with whom I lived until was 21. My master fitted me off with two stout suits of homespun, four pair of stockings, four shirts and two pair of shoes. At twenty two l married me a wife and a very good working woman she was. We took a farm of forty acres on rent. By industry we gained ahead fast. I paid my rent punctually and laid by money. In ten years I was able to buy me a farm of sixty acres on which I became my own tenant. Ithen in a manner grew rich, I added another sixty acres, with which I was content. My estate now increased beyond all acchildren, who amounted to seven when I was forty five years old. About this time I married my old est daughter to a clever lad, to whom I gave one hundred acres of my out land. This daughter had been a dutiful working girl; therefore I fitted her our well and to her mind; for I told her to take of the best of my wool and flax, and to spin herself gowns, and coats, and stockings, and shifts; nay I suffered her to buy some cotton, and make into sheets, as I was determinee to do well by her. At this time my farm gave me and my while family a good living on the produce of it, and left me one year with another a surplus of one hundred and fifty silver dollars; for I never spent more than ten dollars a year, which was for salt nails and the like. Nothing to wear, eat, or drink was purchased, as my farm produced all. With this saving I put money to interest, bought cattle, fatted and sold them and made great profit. In two years after, my second daughter was courted. My wifesays come you are now rich—you know Molly had nothing but what shespun—& no other kind of clothing has ever come into our house for any of us. - Sarah must be fitted out a little. She ought to fare as well as neighbor Norris's Betty. I must have some money and go to town. "Well wife it shall be as you think best. I have never been stingy; but it seems to me, that what we spin at home would do." However, wife goes to town, and returns with a calicogown, a calimanco petticoat, a set of stone tea cups, half a dozen pewter tea spoons and a tea kettle. They cost but little,- I did not feel it,-and I confess I was pleas ed to see them. Sarah was as well fitted off as any girl in the parish.

In three years more, my third daughter had a spark-and wedding being concluded upon, wire comes again for the purse; but when she returned what did I see! a silken gown, silk for a cloak, a looking glass, china tea geer, and a hundred other things, with the empty purse. But this is not the worst of it Mr Printer. Some time before the marriage of this last daughter, and ever since; this charge increased in my family. Besides all kinds of household furniture, unknown to us before, clothes of every kind is bought-and the wheel goes only for the purpose of exchanging our substantial cloth of flax or wool for gauze, ribands, silk, tea, sugar, &c &c. My butter, which used to go to market, and brought money is now expended at the tea table. Breakfasts which used to take ten minutes only, when we were satisfied with milk, or pottage made of it, now takes my whole family an our, attea or coffee My lambs, which used also to bring cash, are now eaten at home-or if sent to market, are brought back in things of no use-so that instead of laying up one hundred and fifty dol. than this celebrated couplet of Mr Pape: it has much smartness and but little justice.—Lucretia, Cornelia, Joan of Arc. wary, Queen of Scots, need—and being straitened. I cannot carry on need—and being straitened. I cannot carry on pended -- and being straitened. I cannot carry on th tit brings me not near as much; and further, inclusive; and to determind their fate, the twentywhat it costs me to live (though a less family than four numbers will severally be put into a wheel

> Now sir, this has gone on several years, and has brought hard times into my family; and if I cant re- entitled to formit, rain must follow--my land must go. I am not alone, thirty in our parish have gone hand in hand with me; and they all say "hard times" Now Mr. Printer, I dont know how you live, may be you are more frugal than we are, as all of us used to be; but I am still master of my own house, I am determined to alter my way of living, to what it was twenty years ago, when I laid up one hundred and fifty dollars a year. I know I can do it, for I have got all my land yet. With good management it will yield me as much as ever. I will increase my sheep, my flax ground, and my orcharding. My produce brings (scarce as money is) as much as it No one thing to eat, drink or wear, shall come into my house, which is not raised on my farm, or in the parish, or in the country, except salt, and iron work for repairing my buildings and tools-no tea. sugar, coffee, or rum. The tea kettle shall be sold, I shall then Mr. Printer live and die with a good conscience. My taxes which good example before them, and I shall feel happy in seeing a reform of abuses, which have been grow-
